

Africa's • Most • Influential

WOMEN

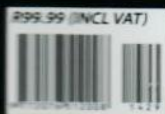

Business • Government

Self-Leadership
Brand Spotighting
The Battle of the Sexes & Social Media
Leading From the Heart
Against All Odds
A Life of Learning

THE PURSUIT of Authenticity

Harnessing Unique Talents

expand your business horizons

celebrating excellence in organisations

ceo

COUNTRYWINNER

From Malawi: Dawa Loga-Lemberger

The Malawi winner in the Business/Professional Service is Dawa Loga-Lemberger, the chief executive officer of Elegant Resources by ArianaLouise and the Malawi Fashion Week Ltd. Apart from being a businessperson, Dawa is a motivational speaker and business consultant on managerial challenges, team building and customer service. She is a published writer for a Malawi newspaper where she pens her own column - Inspiration for days. Dawa holds several qualifications in Business Administration.

From South Africa: Anne Pratt

Born Anne Elizabeth Mary Pratt, South Africa's most influential woman in the Business/Professional Service is the managing director of Memela Pratt & Associates (Pty) Ltd. A high reputation, well respected, player in the premium end segment of the executive recruitment industry in South Africa and globally. It has placed many of South Africa's (and Africa's) top leaders who drive the continent's economy in the private and the public sectors, at board and at top executive levels.

From Kenya: Sarah Margaret Tibatemwa

With qualifications from diverse scientific fields, Sarah Margaret Tibatemwa has extensive experience in both academia and industry. The Kenya country winner, who is also Director: Africa Region of the International Water Association, has many firsts on her sleeve. Perhaps most notable, according to her, is helping Uganda's National Water and Sewerage Corporation to spearhead the development and implementation of the Water Safety Plan that has allowed many citizens the luxury of daily clean water.

